Cycle and epicycle, orb in orb. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. To write without use or elegance.
To SCRIBBLE. v. n. To write without care or beauty.

If a man should affirm, that an ape casually meeting with pen, ink and paper, and falling to scribble, did happen to write exactly the Leviathan of Hobbes, would an atheist believe such a story? And yet he can easily digest things as incredible as that. Bentley.

If Mævius scribble in Apollo's spite,
There are, who judge still worse than he can write. Pope.
Leave flattery to fulsome dedicators,
Whom, when they praise, the world believes no more
Than when they promise to give scribbling o'er. Pope.

SCRIBBLE. n. f. [from the verb.] Worthless writing.
By solemnly endeavouring to countenance my conjectures, I might be thought dogmatical in a hasty scribble. Boyle.

If it struck the present taste, it was soon transferred into the plays and current scribbles of the week, and became an addition to our language. Swift.

SCRIBBLER. n. f. [from scribble.] A petty author; a writer without worth.

The most copious writers are the arrantest scribblers, and in so much talking the tongue runs before the wit. L'Estrange.
The actors represent such things as they are capable, by which they and the scribbler may get their living. Dryden.

The scribbler, pinch'd with hunger, writes to dine,
And to your genius must conform his line. Grave.
To affirm he had cause to apprehend the same treatment with his father, is an improbable scandal flung upon the nation by a few bigotted French scribblers. Swift.

No body was concerned or surpris'd, if this or that scribbler was proved a dunce. Letter to Pope's Dancid.

SCRIBE. n. f. [scribo, French; scriba, Latin.]

SCRUPLE. n. f. [scrupule, French; scrupulus, Latin.]
1. Doubt; difficulty of determination; perplexity: generally about minute things.

Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To your good truth. Shaksp. Macbeth.

Nothing did more fill foreign nations with admiration of his succession, than the content of all estates of England for the receiving of the king without the least scruple, pause, or question. Bacon.

For the matter of your confession, let it be severe and serious; but yet so as it may be without any inordinate anxiety, and unnecessary scruples, which only intangle the soul. Taylor.

Men make no scruple to conclude, that those propositions, of whose knowledge they can find in themselves no original, were certainly the impress of God and nature upon their minds, and not taught them by any one else. Locke.

2. Twenty grains; the third part of a dram.

Milk one ounce, oil of vitriol a scruple, doth coagulate; the milk at the bottom, where the vitriol goeth. Bacon.

3. Proverbially, any small quantity.

Nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines
Herself the glory of a creditor. Shaksp. Meas. for Meas.

To SCRUPLE. v. n. [from the noun.] To doubt; to hesitate.

He scrupled not to eat
Against his better knowledge; not deceiv'd,
But fondly overcome with female charms. Milt. Par. Lost.

SCRUPLER. n. f. [from scruple.] A doubter; one who has scruples.

The scruples which many publick ministers would make of the worthiness of parents to have their children baptis'd, forced such questioned parents, who did not believe the necessity of having their children baptis'd by such scruplers, to carry their children unto other ministers. Gravitt's Bills of Mortality.

SCRUPULOSITY. n. f. [from scrupulus.]

1. Doubt; minute and nice doubtfulness.

Amongst ourselves there was some question mov'd, by reason of a few mens scrupulosity touching certain things. Hooker.

The one sort they warn'd to take heed, that scrupulosity did not make them rigorous in giving unadvised sentence against their brethren which were free; the other, that they did not become scandalous, by abusing their liberty and freedom to the offence of their weak brethren, which were scrupulous. Hook.

So careful, even to scrupulosity, were they to keep their sabbath, that they must not only have a time to prepare them for that, but a further time also to prepare them for their very preparations. South.
